ACLU warns school district about Gideon’s Bibles

Superintendent Mitchell to seek legal counsel

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

The American Civil Liberties Union of Kentucky or ACLU has warned the state’s school superintendents to follow federal law in allowing groups to distribute non-educational material, including religious literature, during school hours or face future litigation. According to a press release sent by the ACLU of Kentucky last week, the group claims it has collected public records from numerous Kentucky school districts documenting that the Gideons International group distributed copies of the New Testament Bible to elementary school students during school hours. This is in violation of established federal law, the group said in its news release, which prohibits the favoring of one religion over another. If school districts will approve the distribution of Bibles by Gideons International, ACLU of KY attorney William Sharp said in a Lexington Herald-Leader article on Aug. 20, then other religious groups must be afforded the same opportunity. “The ACLU further noted that this practice — which has been going on in some districts for decades — violates clearly established federal law, and that the organization will assess future incidents of similar conduct for potential litigation,” the ACLU of KY press release said. Sharp sent a letter dated Aug. 19 to all school super-

Smith’s Grocery break-in lands man behind bars

Last Wednesday was not a particularly good one for a Hammonds Creek Road man now behind bars on burglary and drug charges. Zachory Butts, 20, of 1853 Hammonds Creek Road, was wearing boxer shorts when two Anderson County Sheriff’s deputies knocked on his door last Wednesday afternoon. A short time later he was dressed and on his way to jail on charges that he broke into Smith’s Grocery in Alton and was growing more than 50 pot plants in his home. “He was probably feeling pretty good that morning,” said deputy Chad Cox. “But he ended up having a bad day.” A woman at the residence, See BAD, Page A2

Charges dropped on teen charged with pointing loaded gun at boys; new charges expected

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

An 18-year-old Lawrenceburg teen suspected of holding two teens at gunpoint in a home invasion has been released from jail with all charges dismissed following a complaint about his case’s improper transfer from juvenile to Circuit Court. During an Anderson County Circuit Court hearing last Tuesday, Circuit Court Judge Charles Hickman dismissed charges against Kendall Cunningham, 18, and ruled that Cunningham be consequently released from Shelby County Detention Center. Cunningham, who turned 18 on June 20, was charged March 1 with first-degree burglary, first-degree robbery and theft by unlawful taking-firearm, according to court documents filed in Circuit Court. According to documents from the Lawrenceburg police department, a 17-year-old Cunningham allegedly followed two other male suspects, Andrew Muns and Charles Peach, into a Citation Lane residence in late February as a fourth man, Ryan Ashburn, waited in a getaway car outside. Cunningham’s name was not initially See MISTAKE, Page A2

School board to set tax rate on Sept. 4

From staff reports

A hearing regarding the upcoming fiscal year’s school board tax rate is tentatively scheduled to be held Wednesday, Sept. 4 at 6:45 p.m., according to an e-mail from Superintendent Sheila Mitchell. A special-called board meeting will be held following the meeting in order to vote on the rate, which would increase 4 percent based on a budget OK’d earlier this year.

Long before he had performed before presidential audiences and became a household name in country music, Duane Allen sang at the Lawrenceburg Fair. An advertisement in The Anderson News of July 8, 1965 invited readers to hear one of the hottest gospel groups of the day, The Prophets, at the fair the following week. intendents, saying the letter was not a threat, but an attempt to avoid litigation altogether. "Contrary to others' characterization of that notice as a 'threat,' it should be properly construed for what it is — an attempt to avoid litigation altogether by notifying you of this issue in advance and requesting that you ensure that your school district complies with clearly established federal law."

Amber Duke, communications manager with the ACLU of KY, said in a phone interview Monday afternoon that the ACLU had been getting annual complaints from parents about the practice of Bibles being handed out in the classroom, and decided to investigate the practice as it affected districts statewide. "We've had success of contacting the school directly and dealing with the school or superintendent [about the practice]," Duke said, adding the frequency of the complaints led to the group requesting public records from school districts.

She said following the group's public records investigation, ACLU of KY will follow up on future complaints if parents or community members contact the organization's legal department.

The ACLU of KY recommended in its letter that superintendents be the only authority to grant requests for distribution of non-educational materials; require organizations to submit their requests in writing specifically describing the nature and content of materials; adopt written criteria to determine whether outside groups can or cannot actively distribute non-educational information during the school day; and that district employees are trained annually on First Amendment limitations within the school setting.

In addition, Duke said, the ACLU of KY asks that superintendents review material itself before it's distributed to students.

Superintendent Sheila Mitchell said via e-mail that groups such as local churches as well as Gideons International make written requests through her office, and she communicates with school administrators to indicate a request has been made and approved.

Gideons International has requested to offer materials in Anderson County schools for many years, Mitchell said.

The group usually requests to pass out material once a year in the fall, she said, and passes out Bibles just to the fifth grade classes at the district's three elementary schools.

Mitchell said the district does not have a written policy specifically about the distribution of religious material, but that all requests to hand out fliers or other information to students must be forwarded to her office for approval.

"We have allowed them [Gideons International] to offer with student choice [the freedom for students to accept or not accept materials] since 1995 or before," she said.

Mitchell said she received written request from the ACLU of KY, as did all school districts this summer.

"We provided policy and procedure information as requested and discussed our procedures on the phone as well as followed up via e-mail," Mitchell said via e-mail. "Anderson County schools has worked with the ACLU to understand the purpose of the open records request and answer any questions regarding our policies and procedures."

Mitchell said she planned on asking for recommendations from the school district's legal counsel, attorney Robert Chenoweth, as the district moves forward into the new school year.

18-year-old Kaitlyn Slattery, was also charged with possession of a controlled substance, growing marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Both were arraigned Monday morning in Anderson District Court. Butts was held on $10,000 cash bail; Slattery on $5,000 cash bail.

The burglary was discovered early Wednesday morning when a store employee arrived to open for the day and found the glass in the front door broken, according to a news release from the Anderson County Sheriff's Office.

Cox and deputy Patrick Beasley responded and later viewed surveillance tape that apparently showed Butts, along with his vehicle.

Cox said that the vehicle had a mismatched white front fender, which helped them track it down later that day.

"We spent hours riding around out there, looking for that car," Cox said. "But when Patrick turned down Hammonds Creek Road, he spotted it."

Cox said Butts was more than a little surprised when he and taking anything he could from the store.

"He was after anything he could grab," Cox said. "The first thing he grabbed was lottery tickets. I guess he was hoping to win a big prize. He also grabbed several cartons of cigarettes and beer."

Cox said he and Beasley quickly discovered much more than evidence of the burglary.

"He had pot plants in his kitchen in plain view," Cox said. "He had pots of marijuana plants, including five buckets and

"He came out in his boxer shorts and said he was in a hurry to get to school. But once we started collecting the evidence from the burglary, he finally said, 'You got me.'"

Beasley knocked on his door. "He came out in his boxer shorts and said he was in a hurry to get to school," Cox said. "But once we started collecting the evidence from the burglary, he finally said, 'You got me.'"

Based on the evidence Cox said he and Beasley found in Butts' home, it was apparent he was one flower pot in the window filled with 50 or more miniature plants."

Cox said he and Beasley also found prescription Xanax pills, four bongos, nine glass smoking pipes and a pill grinder.

Sign ordinance has major, minor flaws

Tweaks needed but chamber of commerce did work city, county government wouldn't Column as I see 'em ...

It's a shame that after years of effort and no small amount of compromise the new sign ordinance being proposed by the Anderson County Chamber of Commerce does absolutely nothing to fix the current ordinance's fatal flaw.

Not that the chamber could do a thing about that flaw, which is simply that two zoning boards of adjustments — one city, one county — can override the ordinance at will by granting waivers.

The chamber can't change that problem; that's the province of city and county lawmakers who, either through sheer disinterest or lack of will, have sat idly by for years as their appointed boards of adjustment ran roughshod over the current ordinance.

For instance, the current ordinance makes it painfully clear that businesses cannot erect signs with flashing message displays, but a quick look around town reveals that there are several.

Despite being very exacting and explicit, the new ordinance will fare no better if the rules aren't followed by boards of adjustment members who, unlike those who appoint them, have no public accountability.

Not that following the ordinance to the letter of the law is the only problem. There is plenty of evidence that waivers are granted at times based on who's doing the asking.

I sat in on a city zoning board of adjustments hearing several years ago when a local businessman requested a waiver to place a sign with a scrolling message atop a pole in front of his business.

Wearing work clothes and representing himself, his request was quickly dismissed with a resounding no.

During that same meeting, an attorney wearing a suit and tie and toting a briefcase made an almost identical request for his client. That waiver was approved immediately and with no discussion.

Until local lawmakers fix that problem, changes to the current sign ordinance won't matter.

Speaking of problems ...

The proposed sign ordinance has several, not the least of which is that it doesn't jive particularly well with a pesky little thing called the First Amendment.

It also misses the mark on what a sign ordinance is supposed to do, but I'll get to that in a moment.

If approved, residents with campaign signs in their yards will be forced to remove them seven days after an election, a move debated by the fiscal court following the most recent general election until it was pointed out that such a rule infringes on a person's right to free speech.

Provided the signs aren't outside of the legal size limits, government has no business limiting a person's political speech on his or her own private property.

Curiously, the proposed ordinance gives much more latitude to business signs located on residential property, including allowing real estate companies to keep a "sold" sign in front of a residence for up to 30 days — more than four times longer than campaign signs. It also allows for a plethora of commercial signs in yards for contractors and service providers.

If the argument on campaign signs is that neighbors will get sick of seeing them, it's doubtful those same neighbors will be giddy to look at an endless parade of commercial messages, particularly if they aren't interested in who shingled their neighbor's roof, trimmed her hedges or sold his house.

That, more than anything, is exactly where this proposed ordinance misses the mark. The purpose of a sign ordinance is fairly simple: to allow people to comfortably find the location of a local business. When done right, people aren't bombarded with commercial messages — such as the eight billboards on US 127 this ordinance would allow — but yet able to unobtrusively find the business locations they seek.

That the proposed ordinance instead seems more focused on creative ways to pump out commercial messages instead of simply finding a business location isn't a big surprise. The chamber board (I'm a member but am ethically compelled to avoid helping create or propose public policy) is comprised primarily of business owners who understandably are interested in, well, doing business.

There's not a thing in the world wrong with that and their efforts here are to be applauded because, frankly, the chamber did the work elected city and county officials had no interest in doing.

Nevertheless, it's doubtful this proposal will make it unscathed through the city council and fiscal court spanking machines without some major tweaks, if it gets that far at all.

It first has to endure inspection by the joint planning and zoning board, which can alter it, kill it or make an up or down recommendation to the city and county.

Or simply ignore it.

Regardless of what happens, all three should first decide how to better handle variance requests and make the application of any sign ordinance fair and equitable for all.

In this week's column, I'll put on the hat I reserve for education news (not sure what kind of literal hat that would be, but you can use your imagination) in a quick round-up of some interesting education news from the last few weeks.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bikers more than meets the eye

To the editor:

Cruising down I-75 this past Tuesday, motorists gave a double take as they witnessed Hoss Cartwright breezing down the Interstate on his POW MIA Harley trike with a shower chair strapped to the passenger seat.

Hoss, a highly decorated Vietnam vet and member of the Vietnam Vets Motorcycle Club (VNVMC) was escorted by Ed Peirce, also a Vietnam Vet, and member of the Second Brigade Motorcycle Club (SBMC) as well as Joanne Hunter, a Marine Corps Nurse Vet. They were headed to Berea to offer aid to a veteran brother with a broken leg.

The VNVMC and the SBMC may be a scary looking, loud motorcycle gang to some, but to those in the know, these brothers are the ones that offered up their lives for all of our freedom.

The SBMC was formed as a brotherhood in 1999 and was established with the help of the VNVMC as an MC in 2004. The SBMC are the sons, cousins, uncles, grandsons, nephews and friends of those heroic Vietnam vets that fought so bravely in the past for all of us. Their mission statement is to support all veterans especially the Vietnam veterans. As our beloved Vietnam vets grow older, the SBMC will help carry the torch to make sure they are never forgotten. There are a lot of veterans in the SBMC. Although it is not a requirement, having a heart to serve and the love to ride is.

A lot of our members have been awarded many honors for patriotism. Including Chris "Manchu" Hill of the SBMC, who recently received the Patriot of the Year award by the POW MIA National committee. When asked, "Manchu" remains very humble.

"I simply accepted the award," he said. "It is the work and service of all of us that deserves the honor." Eldern "EL" Riley SBMC a retired US Army major and president of the local SBMC Chapter H views the work he and the SBMC does as part of the Lord's work.

We raised over $1,700 for the Lawrenceburg food pantry just a few weeks ago and it is an honor to help with the motorcycle escort of the traveling Vietnam Veterans Wall on Aug. 29. We all have a lot of things in common, we love to ride motorcycles and we all love, appreciate and support our veterans. When it comes to patriotism, it is not done with just words; it is done with deeds.

So the next time you see a scruffy looking loud group of bikers wearing the red and black of the SBMC, don't hesitate to come up introduce yourself and say "thanks." You may be surprised when you get your response: normally a handshake, a hug and a thank you back with the words, "it is an honor to serve and support those that did."

'Stupidity' evident in Obamacare, Middle East

To the editor:

The dictionary defines stupidity as slow to learn or lacking intelligence. Practical applications of both definitions can be observed in the outcomes of the U.S. Congress and the White House.

Salient examples abound.

Our politicians and the United Kingdom unseated a democratically elected government in Iran headed by Mohammad Mosaddegh and installed a dictator who would be more oil friendly to them. More recently, our politicians supplied arms, training and tactical expertise to the "freedom fighters" directed by the late Osama bin Laden, and they gave billions of tax dollars to the late Saddam Hussien (Iraq), the late Muammar al-Gaddafi (Libya), Hosni Mubarak (Egypt), and Mohammad Morsi (Egypt).

The disastrous consequences of those relationships need no elaboration.

The current conflict in Syria confirms the continuation of their stupidity (slow to learn.) They have supplied munitions to the so-called rebels against Bashar al-Assad, and the usual warmongers in Congress advocate more aggressive action. Would they empty their personal bank accounts and spill their own blood to pay for their aggression?

Silly question.

Thanks to our elected politicians, The Middle East in 2013 is a showcase of thriving democracies, peace, prosperity and oil is back to $3 a barrel like it was when they unseated the democratically elected government in Iran.

What did their stupid intrusions and fickle manipulations really accomplish for America? Nothing is the correct answer, not counting the vast expansion of indigenuous hatred. What did they accomplish for themselves and others? Plenty, and I will count the ways.

The politicians and their great-great heirs profited, the military industrial complex profited, the oil barons in America and the Middle East profited, Wall Street profited, the 1 percent that owns 90 percent of the wealth in America profited, and the middle class and the working poor in America paid for all those profits with their blood and tax dollars.

One example will establish their domestic stupidity. That would be the "King Kong" of all examples, the 2,700-page volume of illicit actions and the 20,000 pages of regulations spawned by the "Affordable Care Act." In addition to stupidity, its birth required outright lies, senators selling their votes for money, and disregard for oaths, legality and the citizenry. Monopolistic provisions, written by the beneficiaries themselves, outlawed competitors and insured overpriced prescription drugs. Exclusive privileges were awarded to vote- or money-rich special interest groups.

Even the Supreme Court contributed a portion of illegality to the newborn.

To be fair, it is inaccurate to paint the whole Congress black. The old incumbents most responsible for the foregoing examples should have been voted out of office decades ago. Some freshman and sophomore politicians appear reasonable and sincere. Sadly, they will never get a fair chance to serve America. An antiquated pecking order in Congress will neutralize their skills and desperately needed integrity.

Only one force on earth has sufficient power to override the pecking order and stop the flow of self-serving stupidity out of Congress and the White House. A simple majority of informed American voters.

Nothing 'decent' about Herndon's column

I became enraged as I read [sports editor] John Herndon's column entitled "What happened to decency?" concerning the recent bill passed in California that protects transgender students' right to choose the gendered sport and locker room that matches their gender identity.

Alex Chesser
Guest columnist

Mr. Herndon took comfort in the fact that legislation such as this "would never pass" in Kentucky. It's a reminder that people are still bigoted enough to push their conservative agenda, lack of knowledge and insecurities right over the emotional and mental welfare of the children of this state and the children of this county. This may come as a surprise, but there are certainly gay, lesbian and bisexual students and maybe even transgender and genderqueer individuals in Anderson County's schools right at this very moment. However, they are terrified to come out.

Do you honestly think that a child would choose to pursue such an identity for fun? It's been four years since high school for me, but I don't remember anyone being a glutton for punishment. I do, rather, recall the teen angst that comes along with developing identity and sexuality. Doing anything out of the norm could lay the groundwork to become a social outcast. No child wants that. Children want to be loved and accepted. Having a transgender identity is not a wishy-washy subject that a person debates daily. It's a serious, well thought out, difficult, and very valid realization in our society.

To be fair to everyone, I will lay out a quick guide to the way gender and sexuality are constructed. You are born with a certain set of genitalia that are typically male or female and sometimes intersex (hermaphrodite is not politically correct). Your gender typically matches that of your sex which is referred to as being cisgender. However, this is not always the case. People who feel their gender does not match that typically associated with their sex can transition into the opposite gender. This is being a transgender person. However, some people reject the gender binary all together and choose to be genderqueer and do not follow any particular patterns of masculinity or femininity. Sexual orientation is completely separate of this and can be as varied as gender identity itself.

I know people in this community will likely reject this because it's new and it's scary to think that what they assumed "natural" all their lives is actually multi-faceted and intersects on many different spectrums. You can't argue against what you have not felt yourself either. These facts aren't even incompatible with Christianity, the faith choice of most of our community, although many will use it as defense. Mr. Herndon argued that men had achieved higher records across sports and that it is justification for separately sexed sports. Don't you think we construct this difference in our society? We throw gendered clothes, pronouns, mannerisms, and expectations upon our children even before their birth. Couldn't the differences placed upon men and women's sports create this discrepancy? I'm not a sports fan, but even I know that our nation's interest in men's sports far exceeds that of women's sports. Instead, I put my trust in modern science's analysis

God isn't dead even if we may not be able to pass out Bibles in school Superintendent Sheila Mitchell said she plans on consulting legal counsel, the school district's attorney Robert Chenoweth, before deciding whether or not Gideon's International will be able to continue handing out Bibles in Anderson County schools.

The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) has notified every school superintendent that it will pursue legal action if school districts are found to be violating federal law in allowing certain groups, such as the Gideons, to distribute material during school hours without that same opportunity being extended to other organizations.

You can read more about what the ACLU is recommending to Kentucky superintendents on A1.

Mitchell said there is no written policy specifically regarding the Gideons, but that they request to hand out Bibles about once a year in the fall to fifth grade students.

Mitchell said she wasn't sure when she'd make her final decision about the policy, and it'll be a tough one to make.

Many Anderson County residents enjoy the tradition of the Gideons, and would be pretty upset if that practice were to cease.

However, it's pretty difficult to argue the fact that if a public school district will allow the distribution of religious material during school hours, it either needs to be inclusive of all organizations, or prohibit any group from passing out non-educational material to students.

That would include banning commercial groups and businesses, recreation leagues, local churches as well as the Gideons from distributing non-educational literature.

From what I can tell, the ACLU is not asking for superintendents to stop the Gideons from handing out Bibles, but to allow other groups the same opportunity to hand out their information in the schools during school hours.

I don't believe that's an unreasonable request for a public school district to follow, regardless of whether or not it's a popular one.

And it's my understanding that students who feel compelled to pray quietly, read their Bibles or meet as a religious group after school hours will not have that religious freedom taken away from them — with or without the presence of Gideons International.

ACT releases state scores, district scores to come

Kentucky high school students improved their ACT composite score from last year, but are still lagging behind the national average, according to the Kentucky Department of Education.

The graduating class of 2013 scored an average composite of 19.6, a 0.1 increase from 2012. That's still about 1.4 points behind the national average, according to a press release from KDE.

Reading scores did not really change from last year, but science, math and English all saw increases for 2013.

District level scores for those juniors who took the ACT in March 2013 won't be officially released to the media until the end of September.

Enrollment is important, but daily attendance is crucial for funding

Director of Student Services Derek Shouse recently released new numbers regarding district enrollment for the beginning of the school year.

It looks like the district added 15 more students since the end of last year, but the important thing will be to improve average daily attendance across the district.

The more days your student attends school, the more money the district can receive for its Support Education Excellence in Kentucky (SEEK) funding from the state.

And as Shouse said during his presentation to the school board, this society is becoming an increasingly transient one as families move in with other relatives or follow a job to another district.

It'll be important for the district, as it always is, to watch for second month attendance for growth, which will determine if the district will be able to receive more SEEK funding.

I'm going back to school. Well, in a way.

I'm planning on photographing an Anderson County classroom roughly once a month to show off what the county's students are learning on a day-to-day basis.

Mystery of the missing grapes

I am a natural born morning person. I like to watch the sun come up and brighten my day. Every day the grass and weeds get taller. The mower blades are almost shot and the weed trimmer is whining for the repair shop. We've had a lot of growth this summer and we have 25 more days of it.

As the season winds down, I kick in to winter mode. I like to stock the shelves with all things necessary to get through the winter by the end of September. Because the more I get carried in now, the less I have to carry up the hill when the drive in covered in snow and ice.

Speaking of snow and ice, remember the fog in August trick? It's not really a trick but if you count the number of foggy mornings in August that portends to be a forecast of the number of snows we will get in the coming winter. Did I just hear a collective moan?

This little Benjamin Franklin folklore gem has been pretty accurate the last three years. Did you remember to count? Well, August isn't over yet and I've already counted nine foggy mornings. I'd say get the shovels and the salt. The official winter forecasts won't be out until October, but preliminary reports are already calling for a snowy winter in our parts.

Let's just find pleasure in the remaining warmth, while we can, and finish gardening. Some veggies have played out, some are still going strong and some who planted a fall garden are going great guns. I'm just too tired to plant a fall garden. I still have rows of beans to pick on a weekly basis, as well as all the tomatoes. Summer ain't over yet.

I have a small batch of grapes (six plants) growing not far from the back porch. I've watched them with great anticipation over the last several weeks. Knowing that the sun was adding a little sweetness every day. Last week I checked the hanging bunches and found I was missing a few. I know it wasn't deer, it's way too close to the house and the dogs' watchful eyes.

A few days later, I noticed a few more were missing. Upon close inspection I found no damage, no footprints, no clues. I like a good mystery. If I had one of those outdoor game cameras it would have helped. I decided to just spend more time on the porch to see what I could see. Guess who the culprit was?

I'll give you a hint. She has four legs, a red furry body and a face as innocent as an angel's. It was my dog Tiller. Little fart. One evening I watched her go right up to the vines, noise around for some ripe ones and then snack away. Even dogs have a sweet tooth. At least they're not fattening. Tiller is already a full figured girl. Well, there's just enough for snacking anyway and I always share.

Now get out there and enjoy the day. We're already losing over two minutes of light every day and it's only getting worse as we move toward fall. So, make the most of every minute and as always, Happy Growing.

of gender differences. Psychologists have found on hundreds of studies that priming students with their gender before an exam or task alters their performance to align with stereotypical behavior. When removed, hardly any difference exists between sexes. If you want the source articles, contact The Anderson News and I will forward them.

I wanted to bring this message to the county and particularly to the children of this county. Be who you are. It's difficult, but it does get better. Know that there are truly decent people in this community who will love you regardless of who you are despite those with a contaminated, hate-filled definition of common decency saying otherwise. Our generation will be the change in the world. Just persevere.

Bill removes King as representative in Anderson

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Anderson County will lose state Rep. Kim King as its state representative and receive a new one from Monroe County as a result of district boundary changes included in the state's new redistricting legislation.

Gov. Steve Beshear signed a redistricting bill last Friday that will, if given final approval by a federal three-judge panel, split 24 counties into multiple districts and create four new House districts.

One of those new districts includes Anderson County, which would become the 53rd District along with all of Spencer County and two precincts in Bullitt County.

Rep. King — who currently represents Anderson, Mercer and part of Spencer in the 55th District — would drop Anderson and Spencer from her district and add Washington and part of Jessamine County.

State Rep. Bart Rowland (R-Tompkinsville) would become Anderson County's new state representative.

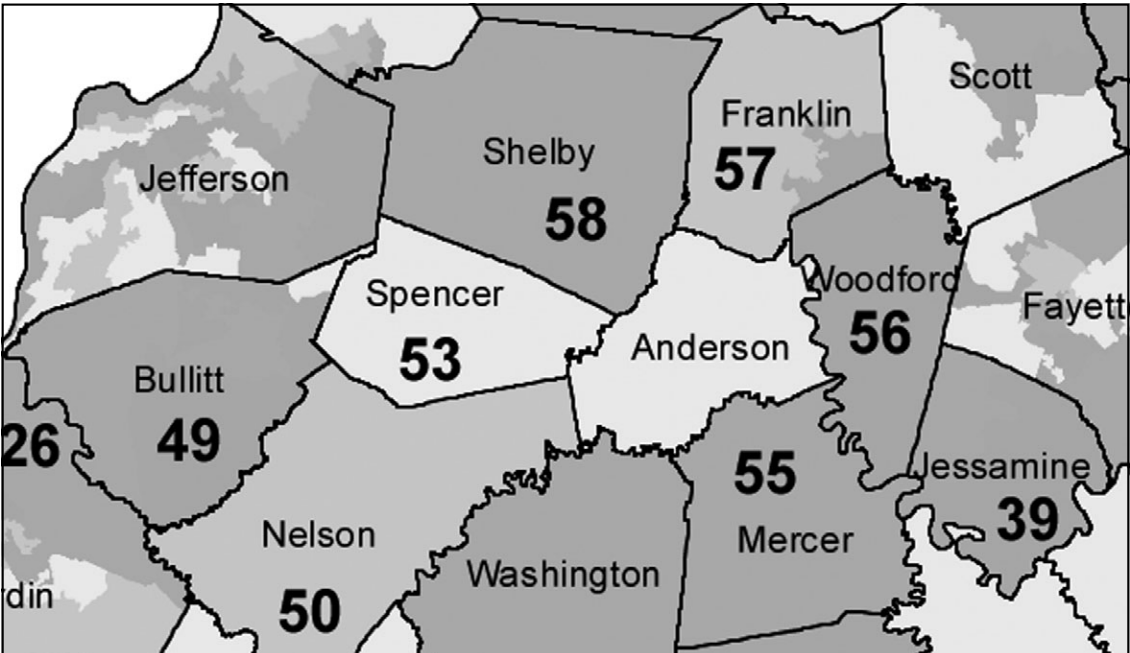

Rowland, born and raised in Monroe County, currently represents Monroe, Cumberland, Green and Metcalfe counties.

"I have told my Anderson County folks I am not going anywhere," King said. "It was Anderson, Mercer and Spencer that hired me ... I am still going to be working on your behalf until this term is completed."

Redistricting is completed every 10 years following the U.S. census, with the House required to keep each district at a desired population of about 43,000 people while splitting the fewest number of counties as possible.

The Kentucky General Assembly has attempted to pass redistricting legislation twice in as many years since King was elected to the House.

A 2012 redistricting plan would have split King's

Maps furnished

According to this map attached to House Bill 1, Anderson County — along with Spencer County and two precincts in Bullitt County — will become the 53rd district in the new redistricting plan.

home county of Mercer and removed her from Anderson County, but it was overturned after King and others successfully sued in the state Supreme Court that the plan was unconstitutional.

The House attempted to pass a similar redistricting plan earlier this spring that also moved King away from Anderson County, but that plan was not passed by the state Senate.

King said she voted against last Wednesday's redistricting plan for several reasons, the main one being its impending legal consequences.

"I had a lot of serious questions about the population parameters, or the population variants," King said in a phone interview last Wednesday. "According to legal counsel I received, it's way out of whack. It's my understanding that according to federal case law in Georgia, it's probably unconstitutional at a federal level. Based on that, I was a 'no' vote."

King said the Georgia case, Larios v. Cox, ruled that the redistricting practices in that state did not follow the "one man, one vote" federal law for population equality and representation.

She said the same may be found in the coming weeks with the House's current plan for redistricting.

"As soon as it is signed by the governor, there are promises that lawsuits will be filed," King said, adding that she does not plan to file any lawsuit regarding the redistricting plan.

Whether representatives will still be able to serve those counties that elected them to their current seats up until the November 2014 election is still up for debate.

House Speaker Greg Stumbo has said state representatives would be allowed to serve their current districts until their terms are up next November, and then the new districts would be established.

Others, like state Rep. King, believe precedent dictates that representatives follow the district number that they filed to run for as candidates, and the district number that elected them.

That would have become effective immediately once the bill was signed into law by Gov. Beshear, King said.

She didn't vow to serve Anderson, Spencer or Mercer counties, King said; she vowed to serve the 55th District.

King, who began her second term as the 55th District representative, said she hates the fact that the new redistricting plan removes Anderson County as part of her constituency.

"I regret it so much," King said of Anderson's move from the 55th to 53rd District. "We [Rep. King and her husband] literally didn't know anyone in Anderson County and everyone's been so gracious and taken me in, those relationships will always be there."

Rowland said in a phone interview last Friday afternoon that much like King, he will try to serve all the counties he represents: both the people in his new district and those voters who elected him last November.

Rowland voted "yes" in the first full House vote for the House's redistricting plan last Wednesday.

"I felt like it was fair enough to me and the people I represent, fair for all members of the House, so I felt comfortable voting 'yes' for it," Rowland said.

He said he's spoken with King about the situation in Anderson County, and that he plans on stepping back to let King represent the people who voted for her.

Rowland said he will, of course, step in as the 53rd District representative and write letters of support regarding economic development, or other business that "technically" requires the assistance of the new representative for the new 53rd District.

"[Anderson County] elected her and she will still be representing them to the end of 2014," Rowland said.

Rowland said he plans to file as a candidate for representative in his home district, which is now the 21st District.

Therefore, the 53rd District will have an open seat for state representative for 2014.

Those interested in running may file with the Board of Elections beginning Nov. 6 of this year for next year's election.

In the meantime, King said, she will be available for all of her Anderson County constituents for the remainder of her term, despite the fact that Anderson will no longer be a part of the 55th District.

"I highly encourage all of the citizens to consider running for that seat and if anyone has any questions, I would welcome those questions," King said.

The state Senate also redrew its district boundaries, but the effects on Anderson County are minimal.

The 7th Senate District, represented by state Sen. Julian Carroll (D-Frankfort) will add Gallatin and Owen to his district along with current counties of Anderson, Franklin and Woodford.

Ex-state senator charged with DUI following wreck

Police say Pendleton blew three times legal limit after smacking tractor-trailer

By Ben Carlson
News staff

A former Kentucky state senator was charged with DUI following a non-injury wreck earlier this month on the Bluegrass Parkway in Anderson County.

Joey Pendleton, 67, of 905 Hurst Drive, Hopkinsville was more than three times over the legal limit for alcohol when he was arrested, according to a citation filed by deputy Brian Boggs of the Anderson County Sheriff's Office.

Pendleton, a Democrat who was defeated in the 2012 general election, served five terms in the state senate, representing Kentucky's 3rd District, which includes Christian, Todd and Logan counties.

Pendleton "swayed back and forth" and failed several field sobriety tests after telling police he had not been drinking, according to police reports. Police said Pendleton told them he had been taking depression medication and muscle relaxers before the wreck, and that they found an open bottle of vodka in his vehicle.

Police were called when the car Pendleton was driving struck a tractor-trailer while heading east on the Bluegrass Parkway near exit 59 around 9:30 p.m.

The driver of the truck told police that he noticed Pendleton's vehicle coming up behind him at a high "very rate of speed" and that once the vehicle was alongside his it "for no apparent reason" swerved into the flatbed trailer he was hauling.

The truck driver said Pendleton's vehicle then "ricocheted from the center of the trailer down to and into the rear wheels of the flatbed," according to police reports, before turning sharply and swerving into the median then back onto the roadway.

Pendleton first told police that the tractor-trailer swerved into his vehicle, a 2008 Chevrolet SUV, then changed his story and said he didn't see the tractor-trailer and veered into it, according to police reports.

Pendleton was charged with an open container violation and DUI before being booked into the Shelby County Detention Center and later released on his own recognizance.

He is scheduled to appear Sept. 30 in Anderson District Court.

According to Pendleton's campaign website, he served as president pro tem of the senate in 1999 and caucus whip for the senate democratic caucus from 2005-08.

He won numerous awards during his tenure, including the 2009 National Fraternal Order of Eagles Humanitarian Award, 2008 Friend of Kentucky 4-H Leadership Award; 2008 Adairville Strawberry Festival Award for Service; Tri-Kentucky released by law enforcement due to his juvenile status.

Once inside Peach, Muns and Cunningham allegedly stole $30 in cash from one of the teen victims along with a .9 mm handgun and a .40 caliber rifle with a folding stock that belonged to owner of the residence, who was not home at the time of the home invasion.

Cunningham wore a bandana over his face, police said, and allegedly pointed the handgun at two teenagers inside the home and threatened them.

During the invasion, police said, Cunningham removed the gun's magazine and showed the two teenage victims that the gun was not fake, and that it was loaded.

Cunningham's legal defense, Brent Cox of Lexington, filed a motion Aug. 20 to dismiss the indictment against Cunningham and claimed Cunningham's transfer order to Circuit Court was insufficient and invalid.

As Cunningham's case was being transferred in March so he could be tried as an adult in Circuit Court, the Anderson County District Court needed to determine if Cunningham understood the consequences of the transfer.

The court failed to communicate with Cunningham regarding the case's move to Circuit Court, Cox said in his motion to dismiss, with the only acknowledgment of the waiver involving Cunningham's former attorney Kristin Gonzalez stating Cunningham stipulated to transfer to the Circuit Court.

The record is silent, Cox wrote, on any considerations of whether the court directly engaged with Cunningham about the consequences of this action.

"The District Court did not engage Kendall through a colloquy or in any other meaningful way to determine if his 'waiver' of the preliminary or transfer hearing was made voluntarily, knowingly and intelligently," Cox said in his motion to dismiss Cunningham's indictment filed Aug. 20.

The charges against Cunningham were dropped, and the case will be remanded back to district court for an additional transfer hearing, Commonwealth

Attorney Laura Donnell said Monday.

The Commonwealth Attorney's Office is currently working with the Anderson County Attorney's Office to make sure the case is eventually transferred to Circuit Court so that Cunningham can be tried as an adult in front of a jury, Donnell said.

"We have every intention in seeing that case transferred to circuit court and that he be tried as an adult," Donnell said.

Donnell said she was not at liberty to say if an electronic arrest warrant had been filed for Cunningham because Cunningham, 17 years old at the time of his arrest, was initially charged as a juvenile.

Juvenile court proceedings are confidential, Donnell said, but a source has confirmed to The Anderson News that a pick-up order has been filed for Cunningham's arrest on his original charges.

Prior to his release, Cunningham was being held in the Shelby County Detention Center.

Clark takes home state fair blue ribbon for bourbon pie

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Lisa Gunther Clark of Lawrenceburg said she was "tickled" last Tuesday as she watched a Kentucky state fair judge take a bite of her bourbon tollhouse pie, lift up Clark's entry and give the pie a sniff.

Clark said she wanted to taste the bourbon in her prize-winning bourbon tollhouse dessert, so she included 3 teaspoons of a 100 proof "Very Old Barton" Kentucky straight whiskey.

Earlier this year, Clark said she tasted a tollhouse pie at a Lexington restaurant and created her own version at home, increasing the chocolate chips and adding bourbon. Clark said she "figured everything goes better with bourbon."

It seems the judges agreed, saying it was the perfect combination of bourbon, vanilla, chocolate chips and nuts that made Clark's pie the winner of the Pillsbury Pet-Ritz pie crust baking championship held at the Kentucky state fair last week.

Since moving to southern Anderson County from Lexington in 1985, Clark has participated in numerous Kentucky state fair cooking competitions.

Clark's father, a University of Kentucky architecture professor, entertained colleagues while Clark was growing up. Clark learned how to cook from her mother, who helped her father entertain guests.

"Mother threw wonderful, beautiful dinner parties, and that's where I learned," she said.

Clark has won four state fair blue ribbons, but this is the first for a special cooking competition, she said.

With general cooking competitions, the competitor prepares the dish and awaits the judges' result. In the case of special competitions like the Pillsbury competition (where the only thing Clark was required to do was use the company's frozen pie crust in her recipe), Clark got to watch the judges as they evaluated her pie-making skills.

Each judge gets one table, and picks two pies to move on to the "semi-finals," where all four judges taste. Clark estimated that her bourbon tollhouse pie beat out about 35 other entries.

"Yes, it is nerve-wracking, but it's fun," Clark said of special cooking competitions like Pillsbury. "You get to see [judge's] reactions. You never know what the judges are looking for."

Her bourbon tollhouse pie wasn't the only winner for Clark at this year's state fair.

She won another blue ribbon for an oatmeal cookie in the general competition, and a fourth place ribbon for an amaretto cheesecake.

Clark said she was excited for a fourth cooking competition entry — a herb-rubbed pork tenderloin with an orange and bourbon glaze for the Evan Williams bourbon cooking

1/2 cup white sugar
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup flour
3/4 cup butter, melted and cooled
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons bourbon (100 proof)
1 1/2 cups semi-sweet chocolate chips
1 1/4 cups chopped walnuts competition.

She and her husband Daniel, however, hit bumper-to-bumper traffic on I-64 due to an accident, and Clark missed the competition.

"By that time, it was too late," she said, adding it took 20 minutes to drive 2 miles.

The Clarks finally made it back to Lawrenceburg.

The pork tenderloin went to some friends. Clark and her husband went to La Isla Mexican restaurant.

At least she knows what entry she'll use for the Evan Williams competition next year, Clark said with a laugh.

Clark said she likes to use a different pie recipe to enter at the state fair each year, although she'll wait to give out the recipe until after the competition.

Her friends — specifically a group at Beaver Lake that meets every Wednesday for a potluck dinner and drinks — become "guinea pigs" for state fair entry ideas beginning in the early summer, Clark said.

They'll be rewarded soon, however; Clark plans on making the prize-winning bourbon tollhouse pie for a future Beaver Lake get-together.

School board approves $30K for high school textbooks, iPads

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

The school board unanimously approved $30,399.54 to purchase textbooks for Anderson County High School using collected student fees.

After approving the $50 instructional fee for high school students, the board voted to use the funds collected from those fees to spend more than $30,000 on math, English, literature, psychology, government and other instructional materials for the new school year.

About $14,000 of the request will be used to purchase 35 new iPads to replace a computer lab being used for the STEM program, Anderson County High School principal Chris Glass said.

The iPads will be used as a traveling set that can go in any classroom, he said via e-mail.

School board president James Sargent said during discussion about the individual student fees that in the past, he's disagreed loudly over the institution of student fees.

After researching surrounding school districts, Sargent said, he found that more than 90 per-

Energy manager announces big savings

Gary Stinnett, the energy manager for the Anderson County school district, announced during his presentation at the Aug. 26 school board meeting that the district has saved a little more than $1 million in utility costs over four years since the beginning of the district's partnership with Energy Management. Stinnett said the district has saved $1,009,000 as a result of working with an energy conservation company and paying attention to cost avoidance. The district would have spent more than $3 million in utilities if they chose not to adopt Energy Management, he said. The district saved money, Stinnett said, "just by watching what we're doing."

School board hears safety and security update

Ronnie Fields, the director of district-wide programs and operations, gave a presentation about implementing an "all hazards approach" — from researching active shooter situations to preparing for severe weather — to improve safety and security in the district.

The multi-disciplinary approach Fields is using is known as Crime Prevention through Environmental Design (CPTED) which emphasizes attention on surveillance, access, territoriality or pride in environment and maintenance.

cent of districts charge an instructional fee ranging from $30-200. Franklin County schools, for example, charge $65, he said.

Sargent said he wished the transition from traditional textbooks to ebooks would happen more quickly as technology advances and textbooks get more expensive.

He said he was proud of the fact that the district was one of the first in the state to implement its personal device system, and hadn't heard anything since then.

"We need to advance the same as other counties," Sargent said.

Chief Technology Officer Bret Foster said about 21,000 personal devices connect to the Fields said some of the changes for district safety and security include updating site-based decision making council (SBDM) policies to match the requirements of Senate Bill 8 and House Bill 354, which mandates districts work with local first responders.

Two schools have already conducted safety audits with the help of local law enforcement, and will be doing more in late August and September, Fields said.

Other changes include:

- updating iPhone security systems at Anderson County schools
- possibly closing the middle school's Mustang trail from 8 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. to limit access to the middle school campus
- amending emergency management plans to include new FEMA guidelines
- removing the old wooden playground from Saffell Street and adding new safety features
- adding mats under the swings at Emma B. Ward
- working with the District Safety Committee to reduce worker's compensation claims and in turn, reduce costs for the district on worker's compensation

Board approves band, chorus funding requests

The school board voted Monday night to approve a $9,750 funding request for the high school band and $1,900 request for the chorus.

district's system each day, and that several teachers create their own content students can access online.

The iPads, Glass said, will help the high school change and increase its use of technology.

The textbooks, he said, are a necessity for the upcoming school year.

Enrollment up overall for the beginning of 2013

Enrollment is up by 15 students from the end of last year, Director of Student Services Derek Shouse said Monday night, but daily attendance will still need to be watched carefully.

Although growing steadily at the lower levels, Anderson County Middle School had the biggest drop of students enrolled from last year, with 46 fewer students enrolled than last year.

Anderson County High School had the largest increase of enrollment, with 27 more students enrolled than the number of students enrolled at the end of last year.

Given the economic climate, Shouse said, society has become a transient one, which makes it difficult to track enrollment and attendance.

The district ended up with 15 more students enrolled than at the end of last year, but that may change.

Shouse said the goal for the district will be to improve daily attendance, which is used as part of a funding formula for Support Education Excellence in Kentucky (SEEEK) funding.

He said a realistic goal would be to work hard with elementary schools to increase average daily attendance by 0.5 percent.

Library lowers property tax rates by 1.2 percent, 3.41 percent

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Library trustees, including two new board members, unanimously agreed last Tuesday to lower real property taxes by 1.163 percent and personal property taxes by 3.41 percent for the upcoming fiscal year.

Board president Bryan Proctor made the first motion to accept a custom rate of 85 cents per $1,000 assessed value for both real and personal property.

The new rates will shave roughly $1 off real property taxes and a little more than $3 off personal property taxes on taxpayers' tax bills.

The motor vehicle tax rate — which is fixed because of statute — will remain the same at $2.70 per $100 assessed value.

This year's compensating rate — at 87 cents for real and personal property — would have raised the library's real property tax rate by 1-cent and lowered personal property tax rates by 1-cent.

Library Director Pam Mullins said she did not think a compensating tax rate, set with the intent to provide about the same revenue for a taxing district as the year before, would be needed by the library to maintain its services.

"Given our income last year, I don't think that's necessary, and I don't think it's a good idea. We've lowered last year; we've maintained since 2009. I don't think it's needed or a good idea," Mullins said.

Mullins said she would recommend trustees match the library's real and personal property tax rates for the 2013-2014 fiscal year.

"That's how they started out, that was kind of the intent the way these were set," Mullins said. "I think we should do them both at 8.6 or 8.5."

Mullins said the 85-cent tax rates would lower revenue by about $15,000 as compared to the 86-cent tax rates, but she said the library was slightly over budget last year. The library, she added, should be able to meet the budget passed for the upcoming fiscal year with the 85-cent tax rate.

"The surplus we had last year, looking at the rates, I'm a fan of the custom rate #1 which is the 8.5 [per $100 assessed property value]," board president Bryan Proctor said. "I think we can survive off this."

Mullins said the tax rate calculations provided to trustees did not show income the library has received from delinquent taxes. The library has collected at least $25,000 from delinquent taxes every year since Mullins has been the director in Anderson County, she said.

"That [delinquent taxes] would bring us up to the anticipated level," Mullins said.

Trustee Martha McNaghten seconded the motion, but before the tax rates were passed, library board members weighed the consequences the rate may have on the community, the library and the lawsuit filed against the library.

"This is the rate that allows us to get [real and personal property tax rates] back together so it takes care of some of the confusion with those two different rates," new board member Rachel Dockal said "But it also seems to be a fiscally responsible rate given the budget we're currently working under and the uncertainty that we're facing with the situation with the lawsuits. We have to be fiscally responsible: it seems [the rates] would give us the ability to maintain our services and what we can support fiscally."

The library will receive approximately $18,173 less in real and personal property tax rate revenue next year compared to their current rate of 86 cents for real and 88 cents for personal property per $1,000 assessed value.

At 85 cents per $1,000 assessed value for both real and personal property, the library's new tax rates will give the library about $1.28 million in revenue for next fiscal year, not including new property.

Friends of the Library plan to hold sale over Burgoo, author festival

The Friends of the Library's new building has been placed on the library's grounds, Library Director Pam Mullins told board members during last Tuesday's meeting. The library board, which had discussed paying for the gravel for the building's foundation, ended up not paying for the building's necessary gravel due to the time constraints, she said.

The library may be making improvements to its property in the future to assist the Friends of the Library organization, Mullins said.

The Friends of the Library group is in the process of scheduling book sales to coincide with the library's upcoming ing author's event on Sept. 21 and the burgoo festival to be held at the end of September.

Library board discusses advisory board

Director Pam Mullins came back to the board with information regarding the establishment of an advisory board to assist library trustees with gathering information or investigating certain topics.

The advisory board is informal, Mullins, and a way to build new, future members.

"That was my concern," Library board president Bryan Proctor said. "Are they going to be active?"

Terry Manuel, who had been serving at the library board's interim regional librarian up until August, said Franklin County library currently has a very active advisory committee with a reputation for success and professionalism.

"The advisory board really has no legal status," Manuel said. "The problem with creating a board committee is that it falls under open records; you'll have to advertise and post an agenda. If you have an advisory committee, they do it on their own and it's not a committee of the board. They have the flexibility to go out."

Trustees asked Mullins to research the Franklin County library and present her findings at the next library board meeting in September.

Working his way through Texas A&M - Commerce, Allen graduated in January of 1965.

"I got my first offer to sing with The Prophets in April. On my birthday, April 29, I had my first concert with The Prophets," he says. "I sang with them for a year and that is when we came to Lawrenceburg."

It would probably be a stretch to say Duane Allen remembers much about that date. But I was there. Allen's blue eyes lit up and a big smile crossed his face when I related to him how I can still remember my aunt, Myrtle Perry, being so excited to see the star of the show, Big Lew, The Prophets' tenor.

"Big Lew Garrison was a wonderful person," Allen recalled. "He was one of the funniest people I have ever met in my life. To work with him on the road was like working with a full-time comedian."

"Lew sang so high that we had to have somebody sing under him. Singing baritone for The Prophets was like singing lead for other groups."

Allen, who had also worked as a minister of music in Paris, Texas for two years, thought he had arrived. He thought he'd sing gospel music for several years before settling down to teach music and coach basketball.

That, however, was before Uncle Sam set an incredible chain of events in motion that eventually took Allen to the top of the music industry: Duane Allen was drafted.

He resigned from The Prophets and sold his car. Despite telling Army doctors that he had been treated for a heart condition since he was 3 years old, Allen passed all of his physicals and appeared headed straight for Vietnam.

But just before heading to Fort Polk, La., Allen was pulled out of the group of draftees.

"The man told me, 'The fact that you have this condition and you have been treated for it, if we put you on the front line and if you had a flare-up, you could own the Army. We can't afford you. We have to give you a medical discharge and you will never be called again.'"

Without a car and 130 miles from home, Allen called his banker who agreed to cover the cost of a car and work out the details of repayment when he got a job. Knowing the Oak Ridge Boys had been pursuing him about an opening in their quartet, Allen purchased a 1966 Buick Riviera and headed straight to Nashville to see if the job was still available.

There were no cell phones. There was no e-mail. He just drove all night.

"I went into the Oak Ridge Boys' office and the secretary put the phone down. She walked back to where the other three (Willie Wynn, Herman Harper and current Oak William Lee Golden) were. They came back and said, 'What are you doing here? We thought you were in the Army.'"

After heading to a church and singing several songs, the group offered Allen a full partnership. It was only later that Allen learned the group had told the secretary to try to call him one more time. If that was not successful, the group was prepared to disband.

It all happened in a matter of days.

There's little doubt that Allen firmly believes the God he loves and worships was active. The obvious question is if Allen's deep faith was strengthened by how things transpired.

"I have always had my faith," he says. "This was just another example of how God works in my life, directing every step I take."

Over the years, Allen has seen the Oak Ridge Boys become one of the most beloved groups in American music history. The current lineup first performed together in October of 1973 and when they performed at the state fair last week, it was the 37th straight year the Oaks have been in Louisville in late August.

This year's show was on the turf at Cardinal Stadium after the grandstand had been ruled unsafe and is being prepared for demolition.

"We've been around so long, we have outlived that stadium," tenor Joe Bonsall quipped during the show.

It is a show that was two hours of high-octane energy that belies the fact that Allen, Golden and bass singer

Richard Sterban have all celebrated their 70th birthdays. During last week's show, I was seated near a man who had to be pushing 80 but was dancing with the Oaks. Behind me was a group of teenagers doing the same.

The music celebrates positive values, honors veterans and simply makes fans happy.

During the state fair show, a Kentucky State Trooper joined the Oaks on stage to present them with their commissions as Kentucky Colonels by Gov. Steve Beshear, who honored the group for their many humanitarian causes.

There is little question about the music's root. Country hits like "Dig A Little Deeper in the Well" and "Make My Life with You" have an unmistakable gospel sound.

Even the group's megahit "Elvira" sounds like something that could be heard at an all-day-singing-and-dinner-on-the-ground.

"Some of the traditions in gospel music are wonderful," Allen says. "I learned so much from gospel music. Our four-part harmony came from southern gospel music."

"I never really left gospel music. I just left the business. I have always loved gospel music and I still do. We just quit working the business end of it."

That happened in the late 1970s.

Still, every Oak Ridge Boys' show has a distinctive gospel flair. Last week, those songs included a rocking version of an old standard, "Where the Soul Never Dies" and an a cappella rendition of "Amazing Grace" for an encore.

"I love gospel music," Allen said. "It is my foundation. But it is not my goal to preserve gospel music or country music in its form. They are constantly changing. My goal is to keep the Oak Ridge Boys relevant, so when the cycle comes back around, to be relevant and include me again."

Even though it has been years since they have had a huge hit, there is little question that the Oaks are relevant today.

They probably will be for a long time.

During our time together, I found Duane Allen to be one deeply rooted in his Christian faith and carrying an unwavering positive outlook

Duane Allen loves hoops, follows Big Blue

Had Duane Allen not become a mega-success with The Oak Ridge Boys, chances are he would have become a highly successful basketball coach at some level.

At least, that is how he had it planned.

"I get right into the very intricacies of coaching," Allen said last week before taking the stage at the Kentucky State Fair. "I had dreamed when I was in school that I would be doing this until I got tired of it. I never dreamed it would last as long as it has."

"I wanted to get an education degree so I could teach. I dreamed I would probably wind up in some school teaching music and coaching basketball. I love the game that much." Allen says as a high schooler in Texas, he was a 3-point shooter before there was a 3-point line. "It didn't mean any more than a layup then," Allen chuckled.

The Kentucky Wildcats became one of his favorite basketball teams, a passion that was cemented over the years. "I have always loved Big Blue basketball," Allen says. "My wife is from Kentucky (Bowling Green), my son-in-law is from Lexington. One of my children went to Kentucky for two years, one went for a year."

Both eventually transferred to be closer to their Nashville home.

Allen's son, Dee, is a Nashville musician. Daughter Jamie is married to Paul Martin, who spent some time with the popular central Kentucky group, Exile, and now plays in country singer Marty Stuart's band.

For Duane Allen, the Big Blue roots run deep.

"My daughter was (former UK athletic director) C.M. Newton's secretary and worked in Rick Pitino's office when he was with the Big Blue," Allen says, "so I went to a lot of Big Blue basketball games. I really like John Calipari. I met him when he was in Memphis." Allen, though, is a fan of many teams. He, and several other members of the Oak Ridge Boys, support Vanderbilt, the major college team in their adopted hometown.

The preferences of someone who has made a living singing four-part harmony should not come as a surprise. He loves five-part harmony on the hardwood.

"I love great basketball when it is taught as the game of life," Allen says. "Of course you have to put the ball in the hoop, but you also teach the game of life like John Wooden taught (at UCLA). I am a fan of team basketball. Traditional basketball. I am not much of a fan of attitude players. They come and go and they come at every school. I am not putting my finger on one or another or talking about this one."

Teams Allen follows sounds like the lineup of the most powerful names in college hoops history. Not only does he follow Kentucky, he mentioned North Carolina as another favorite along with a guy Cat fans love to despise.

"Indiana, when Bobby Knight was there," Allen smiles. "I loved Bobby Knight, I don't care if he did throw a chair. I liked him because he built strong character in his players. I liked Arizona when Lute (Olsen) was out there. He had strong, strong teams and good people."

"I like Gonzaga right now. They have great basketball and teach them about the game of life and turn out good men."

"I like schools that turn out quality people with character. Basketball is not a game of how hot-shot you are. It is a game of skill. It is not how heavy you can knock somebody to the floor to shoot a layup."

When done right, it's simply five-part harmony.

"My foundation for God came from my family who taught me," he says. "My experience with God is a personal thing. I didn't get that in gospel music. I took it to gospel music when I went. I didn't get God in country music. I took him where I went. I just found God was already there."

"I want Him in my life and I don't put conditions on where He goes."

It is obvious that Duane Allen lives what he believes.

Early in the summer, I found out how to contact Duane Allen for an interview I have wanted to do for several years. When I did, I explained that I have a hearing impairment which would prevent a phone interview and that it should be face-to-face.

Instead of brushing me off, Allen wrote back, "John, I am going to do my best to make this happen."

Several days later when my wife called the number Allen provided, it was apparent he already had done just that. The interview was already set up. To our surprise, he invited my wife to join us for the chat.

I asked Duane Allen why he did that for a Christian sports writer he had never met. "I very rarely do this before a show," he said. "It is using my voice. I am paid to do a show. But I wanted to do this for you because I knew your physical condition you described. It made sense to me. We'll do it. Why not make that happen? So the way you make things happen, you go the extra mile."

It's more than just being polite. It's being a Christian.

Gabe Uebel, above, says Splatter Inc has grown into a full-service brand and identity company specializing in screen printing, embroidery, heat transfer, promotional items, commercial printing, graphic design and e-commerce.

Learning how to deal with success

Lawrenceburg-based Splatter Inc started small, grew fast and learned the importance of being ready for success.

Splatter Inc was started in the summer of 2004 by Gabe Uebel, Andrew Eaton, Nick Cann, Warn Kenny, Jay Springate, David Sawyer and Charles Humston.

Andrew, Nick, Warn, Jay and David had just graduated from Anderson County High School and were poised to enter their respective colleges that fall.

Splatter Inc began very modestly by creating, marketing and selling "Support the Troops" magnetic ribbons.

"By the end of our second project, 127 Yard Sale T-Shirts, it was clear Anderson County would benefit from a business dedicated to quality screen printed products, on-time delivery, and straightforward pricing," Uebel said.

As fate would have it, all five of the young men who helped create Splatter Inc were soon on their way to their respective colleges and the phone was ringing off the hook.

"Charles Humston graciously allowed Splatter Inc to occupy his old office at 105 West Woodford St., and we were officially in business," Uebel said.

"For the first two years, we worked closely with other regional screen printers, embroidery shops, sign shops, and graphic professionals to deliver projects on time and build our local market."

In 2006, Splatter Inc rocketed through $100,000 in annual sales with the addition of Clay Birdwhistell, Mark Coffey and Brett Morris.

"All three of these talented men helped us drive additional sales, outstanding design and improve customer service," Uebel said.

"Our collective talents set us on a path in 2007 to purchase cutting edge screen printing and embroidery equipment."

"The addition of in-house production and manpower required a new larger location and we moved the entire operation to 101 Hilltop Drive.

"Brad Smith, SmithCo. Properties, stood by us and allowed us go after our dream."

Uebel said 2007 was a banner year with sales exceeding $400,000 in multiple sales channels.

"We also opened the Lexington location of Soccer Premier, the largest team dealer for soccer in the state. Without a question, our tremendous growth and the addition of Soccer Premier in Lexington stretched our resources to the max."

That, Uebel said, was when trouble started.

"Our explosive growth in 2007 was more than we could handle. 2008 was a very difficult year financially, we were not prepared and we had exceeded our capital."

"By the end of year, we had given up our dream of purchasing the two remaining locations of Soccer Premier in Elizabethtown and Louisville, sold the Lexington location back to the founders Soccer Premier and lost three key employees.

"Splatter Inc learned a very hard truth; explosive growth can kill an ill prepared business and destroy lifelong friendships."

But, Uebel said, Splatter Inc stuck with it and came back strong.

"Through our darkest hours, we were blessed by the continued support of local, regional and national clients," he said.

"By the grace of God, we made it through the year and dug in deep to meet our financial commitments to lenders, existing employees and clients."

"Had it not been for Adam Sayre and Rodney Peach, I am not sure Splatter Inc would have survived in late 2008."

By mid-2009, Splatter Inc had consolidated its operation to its original office location 105 West Woodford and moved production two doors down to 109 West Woodford St.

"Don and Jan Collins graciously allowed us modify the space and reduce operating overhead costs," Uebel said.

Since 2009, Splatter Inc has streamlined its operations, paid off equipment, improved profit margins and expanded market share in Anderson and 30 surrounding counties.

Splatter Inc has grown into a full-service brand and identity company specializing in screen printing, embroidery, heat transfer, promotional items, commercial printing, graphic design and e-commerce.

It is dedicated good corporate citizen supporting numerous groups with direction donations, co-branding, discounted pricing and active volunteer leadership, Uebel said.

"Our current success is a result of the time, efforts, patience and hard work of those men and woman who have called Splatter Inc their home over the past eight years," Uebel said.

"Our success is their success. We would not be where we are today without their dedication to excellence."

OFF TO SCHOOL AROUND 1920

A horse and buggy was the mode of transportation for folks in the early 1900s. Driver Katherine Sea Hoskins, and her niece Pauline Bowen, were headed out with Old Check and the buggy on the road to school in the late teens or 1920. Pauline's daughter thought they might have been going to Bowen School in the Sharpsville area of Washington County. Katherine later married Clarence T. Robinson. They had a son, C.T. Clarence died and she married Raymond Hoskins, who had two children, Kenneth and Beulah Hoskins with his first wife. They had a daughter, Wanda. Kenneth Hoskins was Mayor of Lawrenceburg for several years. Pauline later married Frank Eugene Corley, who died in an auto accident. They had two children, Linda and Danny. Pauline remarried Ansel Devine. Wanda Hoskins Perry submitted the photo.

Blacksnake throttles large hen hawk

A dramatic battle to the death took place Sunday afternoon on the old Penny's Chapel road when a hen hawk, about a foot tall with a 4-foot wing-spread, supposedly swooped down to catch a 4 foot blacksnake for dinner and was instead caught by the reptile.

Leon Hawkins, Adolph Darnell and his son, Wayne, found the pair locked in a death struggle and dispatched both of them.

The hawk had one foot clamped around the snake's 1-inch body but the snake had two coils around the fowl's neck and one around each of its wings and was slowly choking it to death. The tip of the hawk's wings could barely flutter, Hawkins said. But the snake was smart enough to keep its head a foot or so away from the bird's murderous beak all during the struggle.

Hawkins said a cow snake got in a cage where he had three full grown quail, a year or so ago, swallowed two of the birds and then with the large knots in its body was unable to crawl back out through the cage's wire mesh.

"I haven't done anything wonderful or brilliant, just been happy and contented," said Mabel Cartinhour the day before her 99th birthday.

She was married to Emmitt Cartinhour in 1905 and widowed in 1947. They had two children, Mary Jane Hearne and Emmitt Benjamin Cartinhour II. The family ran a grocery on Main Street close to 60 years.

Unlike some people, she didn't care anything for soap operas on TV.

"I like sports. Right now I'm getting a real kick out of watching some old man play billiards on the sports station," she said.

Her favorite sport was basketball and she was an avid follower of the Kentucky Wildcats. "I'm for Kentucky anywhere it's at," she said.

She was a good cook and a pretty good driver of a horse and rig in her day.

"I wanted a bicycle more than anything. My father wouldn't give me one. He thought they were dangerous. He gave me a colt instead. She was a fine mare. So I got my own horse and rig instead," she said proudly.

"The one thing I'm most thankful for is that I've kept my right mind. I've enjoyed my family, my home, been happy," she said as she opened some birthday cards that came in the mail.

Day coming when Christians expected to compromise beliefs

On Aug. 22 the New Mexico Supreme Court ruled that wedding photographer Elaine Huguenin violated state law when she declined to photograph a lesbian "commitment ceremony" because of her Christian beliefs that homosexuality is a sin.

Brian Owens
Faith columnist

As a result of the ruling, she and her husband were ordered to pay more than $6,000 in attorney's fees to the lesbian couple.

Kelly Boggs, columnist for Baptist Press and director of the Louisiana Baptist Convention's office of public affairs, in an Aug. 23 article titled "The Moment of Truth is Coming," cited New Mexico Supreme Court Justice Richard Bosson's concurring opinion, in which he wrote, "The Huguenins are free to think, to say, to believe, as they wish; they may pray to the God of their choice and follow those commandments in their personal lives wherever they lead ... the Constitution protects the Huguenins in that respect and much more. But there is a price, one that we all have to pay somewhere in our civic life."

Justice Bosson is quoted further as saying, "...compromise is part of the glue that holds us together as a nation, the tolerance that lubricates the varied moving parts of us as a people. That sense of respect we owe others, whether or not we believe as they do, illuminates this country, setting it apart from the discord that afflicts much of the rest of the world...it is the price of citizenship... [They] now are compelled by law to compromise the very religious beliefs that inspire their lives... It will no doubt leave a tangible mark on the Huguenins and others of similar views."

The time is quickly approaching when American Christians will be expected to publicly compromise our beliefs.

This is a sobering reality for those of us who believe that the Bible is God's inspired, authoritative word to humanity, and that it is binding on our lives; for while the salvation we have received is personal, it was never meant to be private, and we understand that it has ramifications for all of life, including the public square.

It was another teaching of the Bible, namely that all people are created in God's image, that compelled William Wilberforce to fight the slave trade in 18th and 19th century Great Britain. While many so-called Christians were attending church, they were turning a blind eye to the horrors inflicted upon a group of people created in the image of God; they may have personally believed that the slave trade was immoral, but the status quo caused them to compromise their beliefs. Wilberforce, however, was compelled by his belief in what Scripture said about the dignity of humanity as being of equal worth in God's sight. The atrociousness of this godless practice could not be ignored. At one point Wilberforce wrote, "So enormous, so dreadful, so irremediable did the [slave] trade's wickedness appear that my own mind was completely made up for abolition. Let the consequences be what they would: I from this time determined that I would never rest until I had effected its abolition."

Whether it is our view on God's design for marriage, the full humanness of an unborn child, or the exclusivity of Jesus Christ for salvation, the weight of our faith cannot be bound within the unnatural constraints of our private lives. The fact Christians are called to be salt and light precludes this (Matt. 5:13-16). Wilberforce once wrote in his journal, "My walk is a public one...my business is in the world, and I must mix in the assemblies of men or quit the post which Providence seems to have assigned me."

When Christians leave the house each day, we cannot hang our convictions by the door to be picked up only when we return home; they are part and parcel of who we are.

As the reformer Martin Luther said at the Diet of Worms in April 1521, "to go against conscience is neither right nor safe...here I stand, I can do no other. So God help me."

God help us all, just as he did the Huguenins, to stand, whether it is popular or not; for we can do no other.

ANNIVERSARY

Cox

Donald Lee and Mary Jane Cox

Donald Lee and Mary Jane Cox of Lawrenceburg will celebrate their 50th anniversary on Aug. 29.

Donald and Mary were married Aug. 29, 1963, at the Lexington Avenue Baptist Church in Danville by the Rev. Elroy Lamb. Mary's mother, Elizabeth Curtsinger and Brenda Rankin were in attendance with Donald and Mary.

Mary is the daughter of Elizabeth Curtsinger and the late Raymond Curtsinger.

Donald is the son of the late Irene Dale and the late Lenious Cox.

Mr. and Mrs. Cox are both enjoying retirement and spending time with each other.

Mrs. Cox worked as a homemaker while her children were growing up and later worked as a secretary for a CPA office. Mr. Cox is retired from the Kroger Company after many years of service.

They have two children, Donald L. Cox II and his wife, Karen; Kevin A. Cox and his wife, Sue, all of Lawrenceburg.

They four granddaughters, Jessica Cahue and her husband, Greg, Georgetown; Brittany Ingram and her husband, Michael, Cynthiana; Mackenzie Cox; and Madison Cox; both of Lawrenceburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Cox celebrated their 50th anniversary with a surprise party on Aug. 17 at the community building in the Anderson County community park. They were joined by more than 50 friends and family. "They celebrated the joyous occasion with a wedding cake and reception that was 50 years in the making," event organizers said.

Humane Society to hold 'Pizza for Pups' fundraiser

From staff reports

The Anderson Humane Society will be holding a "Pizza for Pups" fundraiser Aug. 29 from 6-8 p.m. at Edwardo's Pizza on Glensboro Road.

The buffet (dine in or carry out) includes salad, pizza, pasta, potatoes and chicken wings. Dinner can be ordered from the menu as well.

The Anderson Humane Society cares for homeless animals until they can find their new family, fundraiser organizers said in a news release.

The Society is a non-profit organization and receives no general tax fund monies. "They rely on the generosity of animal lovers," organizers said.

All tips and 10 percent of sales will go towards helping the Society provide food, shelter and veterinary services for animals.

"Please join them on Aug. 29 and help them help the animals," organizers said.

MARCHING BEARCATS OPEN SEASON WITH MARK TWAIN INVITATIONAL

The Anderson County Marching Bearcats participated in the Mark Twain Invitational in Adair County this past weekend. Band director Patrick Brady said although no bands were scored on their performances, the Anderson County band met with the judges and received constructive feedback. 'They said it was the best start for us ever,' Brady said via e-mail. 'They love the costuming for the guard, new uniforms and concept. They couldn't say we were one of the bests, but they couldn't hide their enthusiasm for what they had had witnessed.' Pictured are the Anderson County High School marching band and color guard competing in Adair County this past weekend at the Invitational.

Football time in Anderson County

Hopes high but return to Bowling Green not a lock

One of life's simple pleasures had to be listening to John Ward let his listeners know the Tennessee Volunteers were about to kick it off.

"It's football time in Tennessee!" became the wonderful trademark of the man Vol fans revered in the same manner that Kentucky fans idolized Cawood Ledford.

Since there is no local radio coverage, I guess what I can type will have to suffice.

"It's football time in Anderson County!"

(I hope both of the Tennessee fans in Anderson County accept my apologies!)

Enough of the smack. Let's just think for a few minutes why 2013 is one of the most anticipated seasons in Anderson history. The Bearcats should be good.

They could be very good.

They might even become great, but there are 10 games - with only a couple of pre-season patsies on the slate - and as many as five playoff games to go.

There are surprises to be experienced, injuries to overcome and even weather forecasts to consult in formulating a game plan.

Two years ago, Anderson made it all the way to the state championship game before being thrashed by Bowling Green 55-3. The year before, Anderson won two playoff games for the first time ever before bowing to John Hardin in the regional final.

Anderson fans believe the current Bearcats can do the same thing. With 16 seniors and starters back at 18 positions along with the first-string kicker/punter, Anderson fans are giddy. I believe I have fielded more questions about the Bearcats' prospects this off-season than I have since the days Joe Smith was running the offense in 1991-1993.

Let's look at whether the excitement is warranted.

Why Anderson County fans should be giddy.

First there is talent.

A coach at one of the Bearcats' district rivals explained that the Bearcats "have talent all over the field."

Indeed they do.

There is not a spot on the field where the Bearcats have someone who cannot make plays. That is huge in high school sports.

Second, there is experience.

Part of the charm of high school sports is its cyclical nature. Rarely does a team stay at the top very long, especially in the public schools. Part of that is because kids graduate. They can only stay around four

Early tests spoil start to Bearcats' season

By John Herndon

Anderson County wanted some routine tests, not some final exams to start the season.

Madison Central and district rival Collins showed the Bearcats they have some areas that need work during Anderson's first two games of the boys' soccer season last week. Madison Central rolled to a 5-2 win over the Bearcats Thursday night in Richmond.

Saturday, Collins struck quickly in the first half and rolled to a 4-0 win in a 30th District matchup.

"I am not worried about the season. This was a winnable game, Anderson coach Khamisi Campbell said of the Collins loss. "We can correct some things."

Anderson rarely threatened against a Collins team that was ranked in the state's Top 5 for much of last season.

When the Bearcats did mount any sort of a scoring opportunity, the Collins defense recovered with strong clears.

The teams were scoreless through the first 10 minutes, but then Collins scored three times in the next eight minutes to take command. The Titans completed the scoring with just over three minutes remaining when they put a rebound back in the net.

At Madison Central, the hosts took early control and never looked back.

Landon Curry and Garrett Pritchert found the net for the Bearcats while Corey Smith and Dalton Wells were credited with assists.

Campbell said Anderson made some crucial mistakes early. "We played much better in the second half. We will correct it and we will be much better for it," he said.

BEARCAT FOOTBALL PREVIEW

Anderson opens season Friday at Clark

Peach warns Cardinals much improved over last year's 1-10 squad

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

George Rogers Clark might not be your average team coming off a 1-10 season.

Anderson County takes on the Cardinals Friday in Winchester in the Bearcats' season opener, but despite Clark's showing a year ago, it should be a stern test for a team with designs on big things in the post-season.

"Clark County is very much improved," Anderson coach Mark Peach said after seeing the Cardinals Saturday night. "We have our work cut out for us."

Clark has already played one game, routing Rowan County, 58-13, the Recreation Bowl at Montgomery County.

The Cardinals took control with a 20-7 outburst in the second quarter, then outscored Rowan 32-0 after halftime.

Quarterback Luke Sharrock completed 12-of-16 passes for 213 yards and three touchdowns against Rowan while receiver Khamarkis Blanton pulled in nine passes for 153 yards and three touchdowns. Blanton was named the Recreation Bowl's Most Valuable Player.

"The key was our tempo on offense," Sharrock told The Winchester Sun. "We got them tired and I like running the hurry-up offense. It's pretty fun to watch."

Peach calls Clark's offense, "explosive" and says the Cardinals are very aggressive on defense.

"Khamarkis Blanton is the real deal at wide receiver," says Peach, who adds that Sharrock is a quality quarterback and that running back Malachi Israel is "really good."

Anderson might not be at full strength for the opener.

In the Bearcats' scrimmage win over Mason County on Friday, starting linebacker Huston Page suffered a shoulder sprain. His status for Friday night was unknown at press time.

Tough week for Bearcat golfers

By John Herndon

When expectations are high, results are scrutinized differently.

Such is the case with Anderson County boys' golf.

Last week, the Bearcats split a pair of 9-hole matches and placed fifth in the Bates Creek Invitational Tournament, yet the week was almost a disappointment to Coach Jim Beward.

At best, there were mixed feelings about the finishes.

"The day could be best characterized as a struggle for us," Beward said after the Bearcats finished fifth in the Bates Creek Invitational on Saturday. Anderson shot a 319, respectable in tournament play, but had only two MAYSVILLE -- It appeared for a moment that Anderson County's scrimmage at Mason County on Friday night had turned into a repeat of the Bearcats' scrimmage with Danville.

Anderson County coach Mark Peach said "the wheels came off completely for us" in the third quarter against the Admirals. But at Mason County, after the Bearcats surrendered two quick second-quarter touchdowns to the Royals to tie the game, Anderson County scored three unanswered TDs in the final 17 minutes of the scrimmage to win comfortably, 35-14.

"I couldn't be more pleased. Mason County's a solid program," Peach said. "They were a solid opponent tonight, and

Lady Bearcat volleyball splits first two matches

From staff reports

The Anderson County High School volleyball team hit a bump in the road at West Jessamine before rebounding for a win at Western Hills.

According to a news release, the junior varsity started out strong with a win against West Jessamine in Tuesday's first match 21-14, but fell to pressure and struggled to regain their communication efforts on the court. West Jessamine rebounded with a 21-18 win in the second match and came out strong in the third match winning 21-17.

The Anderson varsity had a similar experience with a nail-biting finish in the first game, 25-23.

West came back tough with wins in the second and third matches, 25-7 and 25-11, before clinching the third match 25-14 and fourth match 25-11.

"We just couldn't regain our momentum and ended up taking a loss on the road. We were not about to repeat this on Thursday when we played Western Hills on their court," said Anderson coach Courtney DeLong.

Both the junior varsity and varsity came out strong, according to the release.

"We stayed focused and played together, our effort on the court was positive and netted a big win for us on the road," said Anderson assistant coach Bob Hardin. The Anderson JV won both matches, 21-15, 21-15.

The varsity kept focused on its goals and redeemed the loss to West Jessamine. The varsity won the first two matches, 26-24 and 25-18, but Western Hills didn't go down without a fight and pulled through a win in the third match, 25-22.

With a large throng of Anderson supporters cheering every point, the Lady Bearcats 27-25 win in the fourth match.

"Both the JV and varsity wanted a win tonight and fought hard for it. They didn't give up on their goals, each other or give into the pressure," DeLong said in the release.

Volleyball team to sponsor Student Appreciation Nights

The Anderson County High School volleyball team will be hosting five Student Appreciation Nights throughout the 2013 season. On those nights, students from the respective schools in the county will be admitted free if they are wearing an "Anderson," "Bearcats" or a red and white shirt.

The first Student Appreciation Night is set for Tuesday, Sept. 3 when the Lady Bearcats host Collins. Saffell Street Elementary students who wear the spirit shirts will be admitted free that night.

Other student appreciation nights are set for Thursday, Sept. 5 when Turner Elementary students will be admitted; Tuesday, Sept. 10 for Emma B. Ward students; Tuesday, Sept. 24 for Anderson County Middle School students; and Thursday, Oct. 10 for Anderson County High School students for Senior Night.

All varsity games begin at 7:30 with junior varsity matches at 6:30 p.m. Freshmen matches begin at 5:30, except for a match with Shelby County on Sept. 10 when no freshmen game will be played.

players, Tyler Harrod and Lee Robinson, shoot under 80.

Mason County won the tournament.

"While I am happy with the finish, given the circumstances, we had hoped for our fourth straight top-three finish in a full-field event."

Harrod's three-over 75 paced Anderson and was good enough for a sixth-place tie in the individual scoring. Beward said Harrod earned a "world-class par" on the par-5 18th hole. "His recovery from a treacherous lie may have been the shot of the year this far."

Robinson scored a 78 for the Bearcats, while Nick Wilson fought through a head cold to shoot an 82.

"Jordan Morgan (84) had a substandard round for the first time in a while," Beward said. "Tyler Brothers participated in his first varsity match and suffered from some early nerves."

Even with a finish below what the Bearcats are accustomed to, Beward saw a bright side. "In comparison, we finished ninth last year and shot a 333," he said.

Thursday, the Bearcats squeaked by Shelby County, 164-166, at Weissinger Hills in Shelbyville.

The score was adjusted from a previous report of a 10-stroke win by the Bearcats after it was discovered that Zachary Toles had turned in an incorrect scorecard, causing his disqualification. Toles had turned in a 39, but after that was disqualified, Wilson's 47 was used.

"We played well enough for us to win, but all of us were not happy," Beward said. "Not only did we have a disqualification, but I had to discipline one member of the team for improper behavior on the course while watching the match as a spectator. It was the first discipline against any player in my two years as leader of the program."

Robinson led Anderson with an even-par 36. Two under after six holes, Robinson bogeyed the next two to go even.

Beward said the rest of the team struggled with the short game.

Anderson is now 3-1 in match play this year.

The Bearcats return to the links Thursday, hosting Western Hills at Wild Turkey Trace.

thought we got better. ... We were able to play a much better third quarter (than against Danville), so I feel like we've grown since last week."

Bearcats junior quarterback Zach Carmichael ran for three touchdowns and threw for 234 yards and one score, to senior Ross Cox. Senior Sam Laytart rushed for Anderson County's other touchdown.

Carmichael ran for touchdowns of 3 and 11 yards on the visitors' first two possessions.

Mason County struck back on back-to-back possessions in the second of the scrimmage's three 12-minute periods.

Royals senior running back Jaylin Jones broke an ankle tackle on a swing pass from junior quarterback Jake O'Mara and took it 71 yards for a score.

Mason County speedster Tee King recovered Jacob Tompkins' onside boot on the ensuing kickoff, and O'Mara hooked up with senior Carson Fearis for a 24-yard scoring toss.

"I like that we kept playing hard (after falling behind early), and I like that we can turn it around quick and do some good things," Royals coach David Buchanan said.

But that was it for Mason County, and the Bearcats scored when they got the ball back and led the rest of the way.

Carmichael ran for a 9-yard touchdown on an option keeper. Senior kicker Joe Rose booted the third of his five extra points to give Anderson County a 21-14 lead through two frames.

The Bearcats took possession first after intermission and scored again. Carmichael hooked up with Cox for a 78-yard touchdown just over a minute and a half into the third period.

Anderson County hit pay-dirt once more when Laytart ran right for an 18-yard score.

The scrimmage matched two teams who drew notice from coaches across the Commonwealth in preseason polls. The Bearcats were rated eighth in both the Courier-Journal and Herald-Leader's Class AAAAA coaches' polls, while the Royals were ninth in the Courier-Journal's Class AAA coaches' poll.

Anderson County, 8-3 in 2012, is striving to learn to put opponents away after getting them down.

Anderson County lineman Darius Harvey works with a teammate during pre-season drills. Assistant coach Keith Brown looks on.

"I told our guys we don't have to show how much we can overcome adversity every week," Peach said. "We were able to finally kind of put it away in the third quarter, but how about an opportunity to put it away in the first half? That's where we've gotta take the next step, is to execute at a high level all through the game."

The Royals, coming off an 8-5 season that included a Class AAA, District 6 title, expected scrimmaging the Bearcats would help them get better.

"We had some things exposed that have gotta improve," Buchanan said. "I think when you scrimmage good people, you find out some things about yourself that maybe you wouldn't if you didn't, and I think that happened tonight. (Anderson County does) a good job with their football team, especially their offense, and I think they exposed a lot of things we've gotta work on to get better."

Both teams begin their regular seasons Friday.

years and the coaches can't recruit, except in the hallways of the school

Anderson, however, has veterans all over the field. That does not trump talent, but talent with experience is a premium. Anderson has it.

Thirdly, there is leadership in that experience.

At the end of camp at Eastern Kentucky University, the Bearcats took the unusual step of naming five captains, one more than normal. All are seniors.

Quarterback Zachary Carmichael is only a junior, but he's also a leader and tough as they come.

A year ago, the Bearcats willed some wins when things did not look bright and that experience could bode well again.

But even though Anderson is considered one of the better Class 5A teams and has a legitimate shot at returning to Bowling Green, it would not be wise to make non-cancelable reservations for the finals weekend. Why?

The talent is good but not overwhelming. While the Bearcats have capable players all over the field, the pool of kids even getting a look from the big-time schools is very shallow. There are a lot of good kids who might end up playing college football at the NAIA or NCAA Division II or III levels. They will have to find ways to get out of a region that boasts one of the cornerstones of the University of Kentucky's recruiting Class of 2014, quarterback Drew Barker of Conner.

Remember, last year, many of the same kids who are lining up for the Bearcats this year suffered a 48-0 embarrassment to Cooper in the first round of the playoffs last year. Anderson coach Mark Peach says he has erased that game, by far the Bearcats' worst performance of the year, from his memory. How the team learned from it remains to be seen.

The schedule could be a killer. However, the power is in the non-district portion of the schedule with powers such as Collins and Boyle County looming. There is not a non-district team on the slate that can't beat the Bearcats, but the idea is to get Anderson ready, so this should not be an issue, unless the Bearcats don't take care of business and get thrown into a tie-breaker.

District 6 is very balanced. While most are picking the Bearcats to win the title, Franklin County showed it has no plans to give up the crown it has held for two years with a 54-13 pasting of North Bullitt in last week's season-opener.

Still, the high hopes are warranted. Anderson is almost universally expected to be good. Whether the Bearcats can take it to the next realm is up to them.

A year ago, Clark dropped its first nine games of the season before beating Rowan in the season finale. The Cardinals then fell to Louisville Trinity, 56-7, in the Class 6A playoffs. However, Clark lost three games by 10 points or less in coach Steven Collins' first year at the helm.

"Last year left a bitter taste in everyone's mouth," Collins told The Winchester Sun. "We were very competitive in a lot of the games, and a call here or a play there, instead of losing 10 games, you're looking at 4-6 or 5-5."

Clark has plenty of speed, and Collins tries to get the ball to the burners in the open field.

Anderson, however, hopes to build on an impressive showing at Mason County in its final scrimmage. "Overall, I was pleased," Peach says of the Mason scrimmage. "We played yet another quality opponent. This time, on the road, we found a way to play really well in the third quarter and keep our composure. We were up 21-14 at the half and outscored them 14-0 in the third."

Kickoff for Friday's game at George Rogers Clark is set for 7:30 p.m.

Fall will bring many outdoors opportunities

Another great Kentucky fall is nearly upon us. The fall season brings with it a plethora (pretty sure that's the first time I've ever typed that word and I am grateful for the automatic spell check on my laptop) of outdoor opportunities for outdoorsmen.

Squirrel season opened a few weeks back to several nice cool mornings and the first segment of the early season continues right up to the opening of deer gun season.

Speaking of deer, the archery season for both deer and turkey is scheduled to open on Saturday, Sept. 7 and runs thru late January, 2014.

That's one of the longest archery seasons you'll find anywhere in the country and allows plenty of opportunities to go afield and enjoy God's creations.

The early fall opening of squirrel and archery season allows you to experience the warm, muggy, sometimes mosquito-ridden days afield as they shift into the cooler, frostier times afield as hunting seasons progress into late fall and winter months.

Waterfowl hunters also get an early chance at harvesting.

The early goose season opens Sept. 1 and runs thru Sept. 15.

The early wood duck and teal season is scheduled for Sept. 18-21.

Dove and crow seasons are also scheduled to open Sept. 1.

Of course hunting is not the only outdoor activity ideal to fall weather. Trapping seasons will open up soon and there's still time to do some camping, kayaking or canoeing before the water temperatures start dropping.

Fall fishing in Kentucky ranks near the top of activities not to miss as far as I'm concerned. Granted, I don't fish as much as I should in the fall due to wanting to get in the woods after a long summer. The Lilly navy has managed to get out several times and bring home a few fish suppers and hopefully can get some more opportunities before the weather turns.

License fee increases

The Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission met Aug. 14 and appears set to move on some increases to hunting and fishing licenses beginning March 1, 2014.

Rates for basic adult Kentucky residents are not affected by the proposal but non-resident and resident seniors will see increases.

Proposals include raising the deer permit for residents from $30 to $35; senior/disabled licenses from $5 to $11; deer permit for non-residents from $60 to $160; quota bull elk permit for residents from $30 to $100; and non-resident quota bull elk permit from $365 to $550; among others.

I'll go on record here and say I won't have to worry about the elk permit increase since I've decided (as any regular reader of this column my recall) not to participate until the system is fixed (or unfixed if you have suspicions about the whole process).

I'll also go on record as saying I disagree with $100 increases to non-residents since that is one of the main reasons I seldom, if ever, hunt Tennessee now. They bounced their all-game tag for non-residents from around $150 to almost $300 in one season.

It cost Tennessee my money and would think others were also inclined to find more bang for their buck. I can see the same thing happening to Kentucky. Seems to me a gradual increase over a couple of years would be more readily accepted.

I also don't agree with more than doubling the seniors/disabled licenses from $5 to $11. Come on guys, really?

Let this one alone and find another source for another $6 grab. Don't try to nickel and dime a good program that you've established and put it on the backs of folks on limited or fixed incomes.

Times are tough all over and it's important to realize that the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is funded mainly by grants and money made from hunting, fishing, trapping licenses, ammo sales and boat registrations.

The department receives no Kentucky state general fund dollars to support its budget so increases are needed at times I understand.

Maybe a better plan would be to ease into the increases gradually. Just an opinion and yes I know, everybody's got one.

Take a kid hunting and fishing soon! See ya outside!

Fish and Wildlife Commission raises fees for non-residents

From staff reports

The Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission recommended modest increases in license and permit fees on select non-resident licenses, senior-disabled licenses and resident permits for deer and elk, according to a news release.

Rates for basic hunting and fishing licenses for adult Kentucky residents are not affected by the proposal, the release said. The new rates are proposed for the upcoming license year which begins March 1, 2014.

The commission also proposed the 2013-2014 waterfowl seasons at its quarterly meeting, held Aug. 14.

Commission members proposed increasing the fee for 13 non-resident licenses and permits, six resident permits and the senior-disabled license. Commission members also voted to create separate fees for cow and bull elk permits for both residents and non-residents.

Proposals include raising the deer permit for residents from $30 to $35; senior/disabled licenses from $5 to $11; deer permit for non-residents from $60 to $160; quota bull elk permit for residents from $30 to $100; and non-resident quota bull elk permit from $365 to $550; among others.

The commission also proposed the creation of two new licenses for Kentucky residents: a senior lifetime sportsman's license for $82 and a three-year fishing license for $55. A list of all the proposed changes will be available online at fw.ky.gov, the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website, according to the release.

In other action, commission members acted upon waterfowl seasons for 2013-14.

Last year, the 2012-13 duck season was split into two segments. The 2013-14 season will run continuously because of the late Thanksgiving date this year and the early closing of the federal framework. The calendar shift from 2012 to 2013 created this situation.

Duck, Coot and Merganser

· Duck season opens Nov. 28, 2013 and closes Jan. 26, 2014.

· Season dates for mergansers and coots are the same as the duck season dates for the 2013-2014 seasons. The daily bag limit for mergansers is five, only two of which may be hooded mergansers. The daily limit for coots is 15.

Canada Goose

· Western Goose Zone: Nov. 28, 2013 - Jan. 31, 2014.

· Pennyryle-Coalfield Goose Zone (including West-Central Canada Goose subzone): Nov. 28, 2013 - Jan. 31, 2014.

· Eastern Goose Zone: Nov. 28, 2013 - Jan. 31, 2014.

· Northeastern Goose Zone: Jan. 1 - 31, 2014.

· White-fronted Goose, Brant

· Statewide: Nov. 28, 2013 - Jan. 31, 2014.

Snow Goose

· Regular season: Nov. 28, 2013 - Jan. 31, 2014.

Snow Goose

Conservation Order Season

· Eastern Duck Zone: Feb. 1 - March 31, 2014.

· Western Duck Zone: Feb. 3 - March 31, 2014.

· Youth Waterfowl Season Eastern Zone:

· Nov. 2-3, 2013.

Western Zone:

· Feb. 1-2, 2014.

The commission also increased the Canada goose daily bag limit from two to three birds for the 2013-2014 fall waterfowl seasons. Possession limits for all migratory including waterfowl are now three times the daily bag limit.

Commission members also increased to two the number of canvasback ducks that may be part of the six-bird daily bag limit.

They lowered the number of scaup that make up the six bird daily duck bag limit from four to three.

The next Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission meeting will be held at 8:30 a.m. Friday, Dec. 6.

Meetings are held in the Arnold Mitchell Building, located at 1 Sportsman's Lane in Frankfort.

Persons interested in addressing the commission must notify the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife commissioner's office in writing at least 30 days in advance to be considered for placement on the meeting agenda.

People who are hearing impaired and plan to attend the meeting should contact Kentucky Fish and Wildlife at least 10 days in advance and the agency will provide a translator.

To request to address the commission, write to Commissioner Jon Gassett, Kentucky Fish and Wildlife, 1 Sportsman's Lane, Frankfort, Kentucky, 40601.

AUCTION

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 22, 1:30 P.M.
427 ACRES IN TRACTS
LOG CABIN AND GARAGE ON 20 ACRES
WOODED RECREATIONAL TRACTS

LOCATION: 1520 Wises Ferry Road, Bedford, Ky. 40006. From Highway 42 west of Bedford, turn onto Brays Branch Road then left on Gills Ridge Road to Wises Ferry, then right to property. Signs posted.

427 ACRES OF RECREATIONAL LAND IN TRACTS
LOG CABIN ON 20 ACRES: Selling a one story log cabin on approximately 20 acres with a metal garage/shop with concrete floor. The one story cabin is an open design with living, dining and kitchen areas, one full bath, and sleeping accommodations. There is a large rock fireplace in the living area and it has wood floors and ceilings. The wraparound porch provides a beautiful view of the surrounding land.

This tract also has a metal garage with a concrete floor a blacktop driveway and split rail fence entrance. The land is partially cleared, borders a small stream, and has ample woods for your recreational enjoyment.
ACREAGE TRACTS: Up to three additional tracts from 53 acres to 275 acres of bare land tracts that are mostly wooded and rolling acreage. These parcels are absolutely loaded with wildlife and offer great recreational opportunities. America's First

In the late 1700s, America didn't have any zoos. Anytime an exotic animal like a tiger or elephant was put on display, however, people would pay to see it. This gave Dr. William Camac in Philadelphia the idea to create a zoo.

Camac and others worked hard to get a zoo up and running in Philadelphia. First, they created the Zoological Society of Philadelphia in the 1850s. The Civil War soon started after that, however, and the society would not get the zoo open until July 1, 1874.

Over 3,000 people visited the Philadelphia Zoo that day. Adults paid a quarter to get in, and children, a dime. At the time, the zoo had 813 animals. Today the zoo has over 1,300 animals and a million visitors each year.

HOROSCOPES

You've got a take-charge personality, and an authority will look to you to use it on an upcoming project. Do not disappoint them, Capricorn.

Humility is key to settling a family feud. There is no room at the table for arrogance, so squelch it every chance you get, Aries. A meeting provides finality.

A new face is a dead-ringer for someone from your past. Don't be fooled, Cancer. There is no comparison between the two, as you will soon discover.

Triumph over tragedy, Libra. Every cloud has a silver lining, even the one hanging over you. You will soon find the good in it and turn it around.

Your appetite for information is insatiable. Lucky for you, Aquarius, a coworker whets it considerably. A mission in organization starts with a bang and ends with a whimper.

Prayers are answered, and life looks rosier than it has in some time. Bask in the moment, Taurus, and take a leap forward. A friend keeps a promise.

Lucky Leo. You've got the magic touch, and the world knows it. Soon you'll have more on your plate than you have time for. Take help where you can get it.

You're tested this week, and you pass with flying colors. Share your insight with a friend who's stumbling, Scorpio. A party invite arrives by mail.

Tiny steps now will lead to big strides later, Pisces, so move with care. Approach the project as a process and learn to delegate at each phase.

Whispers are just that—whispers. The truth will come out by week's end. Give it some time to settle in, Gemini. A phone message is returned.

Lots of love is on tap this week, Virgo. You're the hit of the party everywhere you go. A faceoff at home inspires you to make a few changes.

The scale tips in your favor. Go, Sagittarius, go! A friend down on their luck receives a helping hand. A cleanup task proves more challenging than thought.

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE

In order to comply with the orders of the Anderson Circuit Court, the Master Commissioner will sell the property described in the following actions on Thursday, September 5, 2013, at 11:00 a.m. in the Anderson County Courthouse, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky. The property shall be sold to raise the amounts herein-after set forth, together with interest and the costs of this action, and upon the following terms and conditions (unless otherwise indicated):

(1) At the time of the sale, the successful bidder shall either pay cash or make a deposit of ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days. In the event the successful bidder elects to credit the balance, he or she will be required to post bond and furnish surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner. The bond shall be for the unpaid purchase price and bear interest and the rate of twelve percent (12%) per annum until paid in full.

(2) PLEASE NOTE: The real estate SHALL BE SOLD SUBJECT TO ALL city, state, county, and school real estate taxes, whether current or delinquent.

(3) Easements, restrictions, stipulations and agreements of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office. Assessments for public improvements levied against the property, any facts which an inspection and accurate survey of the property may disclose and any and all planning and zoning regulations imposed upon the subject property.

(4) Where the real estate has insurable improvements, the successful bidder shall, at his or her own expense, carry fire and extended coverage insurance on said improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, to the extent of the Court appraised value of said improvements or the unpaid balance of the purchase price, whichever is less, at a minimum, with a loss clause payable to the Master Commissioner or the appropriate Plaintiff.

Failure of the successful bidder to effect such insurance shall not affect the validity of the sale or the successful bidder's liability thereunder, but shall entitle, but not require, the Plaintiff(s) to effect said insurance and furnish the policy or evidence thereof to the Master Commissioner, if it so desires, and the premium thereon or the property portion thereof shall be charged to the successful bidder as the successful bidder's cost.

(5) The property shall otherwise be sold free and clear of any right, title and interest of all parties to the action and of their liens and encumbrances thereon excepting easements and restrictions of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office, and such right of redemption which may exist in favor of the United States of America or the Defendant(s), and any matters disclosed by an accurate survey and inspection of the property.

KENTUCKY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION NOTICE OF HEARING (Amounts based on levy of 4% rate)

District: 011 Anderson County
School Year: 2013 - 2014

The Anderson County Board of Education will hold a public hearing in the Anderson County Board of Education Training Room on September 4, 2013 at 6:45PM to hear public comments regarding a proposed general fund tax levy of 57.6 cents on real property and 57.6 cents on personal property.

The General Fund tax levied in fiscal year 2013 was 55.2 cents on real property and 55.2 cents on personal property and produced revenue of $8,051,732. The proposed General Fund tax rate of 57.6 cents on real property and 57.6 cents on personal property is expected to produce $8,431,739. Of this amount $1,018,181.49 is from new and personal property. The compensating tax for 2014 is 55.4 cents on real property and 55.4 cents on personal property and is expected to produce $8,109,693.

The general areas to which revenue of $380,007 above 2013 revenue is to be allocated are as follows: Cost of collections, $11,839; instruction, $258,110 transportation, $73,370; and maintenance of plant, $36,688.

The General Assembly has required publication of this advertisement and information contained herein.

Statement of Public Funds Received and Disbursed by Public Officers of the Anderson County Health Department for the Fiscal Year Ending June 30, 2013. Published in Accordance with KRS 424.220

The following information and supporting data may be inspected by the general public at 1180 Glensboro Road, Lawrenceburg, KY, August 29, 2013, between 8:00 am - 12:00 pm.

LOCATION: The sale will be conducted at 3985 Springfield Rd., Bloomfield, Ky.

Directions: From Bloomfield take Bardstown/Springfield Rd (Hwy 62) about 2 miles to the intersection of Hwy 62 & Hwy 55. Turn left on Springfield Rd. (Hwy 55) South and go 2 miles to sale site. Auction signs posted.

Due to health reasons, Bishop Realty & Auction has been commissioned to sell at ABSOLUTE AUCTION the following real estate and personal property under the terms and conditions as stated.

REAL ESTATE: Selling 4 separate tracts of land in and around Bloomfield, Ky. These properties range in size from residential lots to 14.15 acres.

Tract #1- (106 Hill Street) A vacant residential lot zoned R-1C located in the City of Bloomfield, Ky. Excellent site for a home near downtown.

Tract #2 - (135 Depot Street)- A vacant residential lot zoned R-1C located in the city of Bloomfield, There is an existing water meter on this property.

Tract #3 - (720 Campground Road)- 14.15 Acres and a nice 36 x 70 metal barn with the majority of the farm in woods. What a great place for the out-doorsman. There is wildlife all over this tract with about an acre of soybeans already up and growing for that big Buck to feast on this fall. Nice private home site with city water available. We don't often get tracts like these to sell with good access and located not far from town.

Tract #4 - (3985 Springfield Road)- 12.87 Acres with a 42 x 72 barn and an existing water meter on the property. The majority of this tract is clear with the balance in wooded land. What a place to build you dream home. You will wear the tires off your pickup truck searching the country for a tract like this.

TRACTOR & EQUIPMENT: N.H. 4835 Tractor with a Bushhog 2425 QT Loader, N.H. 163 Hay Tedder, N.H. Hay Baler, N.H. 67 Square Baler, Case-International 8430 Round Baler, N.H. 510 Manure Spreader, J.D.
